
Four frames representative of the animation used in the sort-first experiments. These images were produced by the sort-first code (though the image aspect ratio varies slightly from the actual test cases). There are three vehicles arranged in a circle. The camera makes a revolution around the circle's perimeter. The blue lines indicate the adaptive screen partitioning performed by the sort-first load-balancing algorithm. The vehicles' wheels have a fairly high concentration of primitives.