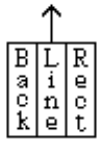
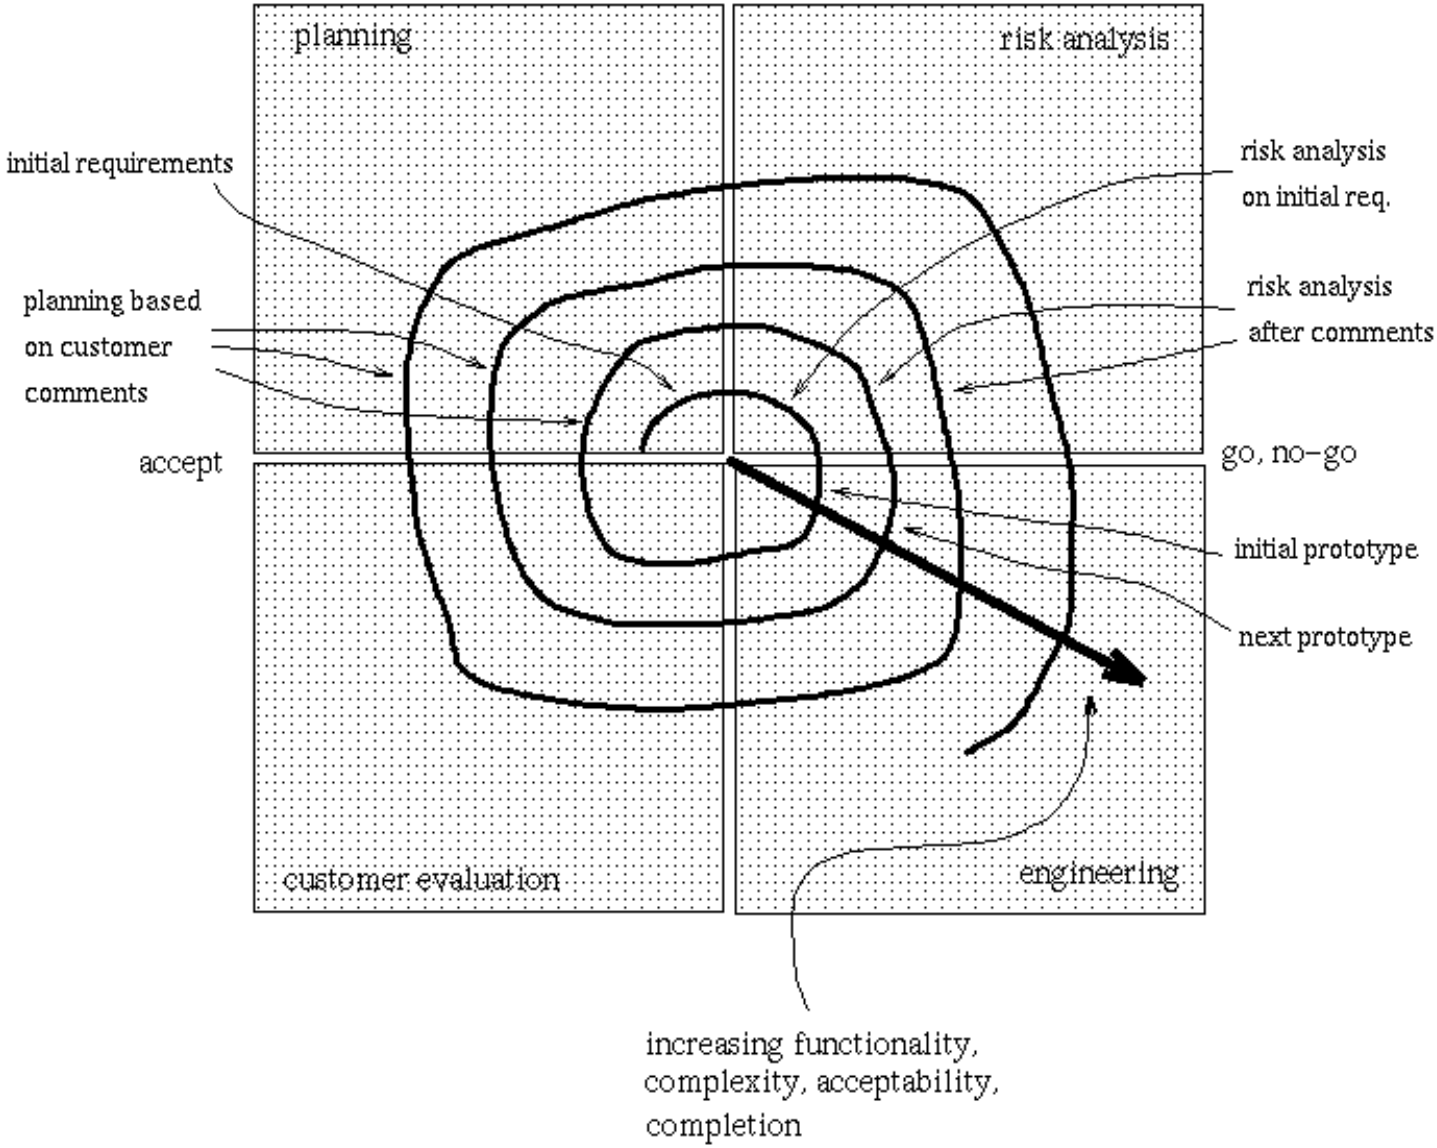
Spiral model

Described by Barry Boehm as a metamodel... that is, a description of the activities surrounding an engineering process (developing working code) in a company.





Sometimes called an "enterprise model" (a simple one).