

Question 1: CSFR Defenses CSRF defenses rely on a new CSRFtoken that is introduced either in the body of the HTML or in a new HTTP header. In both cases, the CSRF token exists in the clear on the client side. Why is this a viable defense?

Question 2: SOP Specification Why do you think that documents don't inherit the origin of the loading script? if they did, consider what could happen